Tips for Finding and Evaluating Information

- Use two or more different kinds of source materials, such as books, magazines, web sites, and interviews.
- The more sources you use the more able you are to verify the information you find.
- In the library, use catalogs to find books, magazines, newspapers, videos, and CDs.
- On the Internet, use search engines to find web sites.
- Use once source to find others. Follow the links on Internet web sites about your topic. Use a book's bibliography to find other sources.
- Write down the title and author or web site address for every source you use.
